But the minute they saw those gate receipts slipping out of their hands into hers they did a high jump backwards that beat one of her front ones.

"Babe" has always beat women. This is the first time she has ever entered the male ranks and showed them up.

P. S.: I told you Mr. Hoover would quit worrying about the debts and leave 'em alone.

CHRISTMAS

It is more than an event in the history of Christianity which a large part of the world's population celebrates at Christmas. It is, rather, a festival in honor of a human quality without which Christianity's appeal would be futile—brotherly love.

Growth and refinement of the festival in this country has produced what is fit to rank among the highest achievements of social development. Important as is the religious origin, it literally has gone beyond the boundaries of religion, establishing new traditions in the purely social field.

Christmas and the surrounding holiday season have become an annual occasion for an universal outpouring of goodwill, the ultimate ideal of Christian philosophy even though means of reaching it have been losing some of their strict religious identity. That humanity believes in and enjoys its yearly holiday metamorphosis into a state of unusual friendliness is attested to by the vigor with which it enters into it.

Each recurring Christmas resolves itself into a general effort to recapture and augment the joy of those that have gone before. From childhood's materialistic conception of a wonderful day on which a jolly old pagan saint of vague identity bestows wondrous gifts on them to old age's delight in an occasion which allows men to emerge for a time from their shackles of selfishness, there is no period of life in which the day does not bring rich compensation in happiness.

Its celebration in this year of intense economic unsettlement that has shaken men's faith in systems and institutions might well be made a time for universal thankfulness that there yet exists undiminished in human hearts a quality whose power to bring order out of chaos is greater than that of temporary schemes. There always will be brotherly love, even though it be battered cruelly by release of those unworthy passions which have been man's undoing in every period of his history. And there always will be Christmas observed intensely because it has helped mankind to live more fully. Without the day and without the story that it retells, peace on earth and good will toward men might never have become an international ideal.

What Others Say

"CHEAP UNITED STATES LABOR"

The ghosts of hoary tariff arguments must have jumped up and howled when Lady Astor in the House of Commons asked protection for British workmen from "cheap United States labor."

Presumably defenders of the tariff as the cause of the prosperity we see on every hand will challenge the lady's figures. They will do a lot of nose diving into statistics as soon as they recover from the shock of seeing their grand old flag-waving argument turned against them.

However, those acquainted with the grotesquely small wages paid for generations by highly protected American industries as the cotton textile trade will be inclined to back Lady Astor's contention.

The Manchester cotton spinners are not high paid from the American point of view. But many of the women and children who work sun to sun in the southern cotton mills would be glad to swap places with the "respectable trade unions of Manchester," whose cause Lady Astor espoused.

The very day Lady Astor was speaking out in Commons, Mary Anderson, chief of the women's bureau at Washington, was presenting her report telling of pay cuts, unemployment and "shocking low wages" among women workers many of them in highly protected industries.

"Cheap United States labor" may shock a generation into whose ears have been dinned the familiar tariff argument. But it is a tragic reality to million of American workers no

JEWISH PEOPLE
TELLS OF HISTORY

—By Arthur Brisbane—
(Copyright, 1932 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

MIAMI, FLA.—The Jewish people were originally Americans. Mr. Alfred Butes of the London "Times Book Club" sends word of a new book that will interest the millions that know about the flight from Egypt. J. Fitzgerald Lee, author of "The Great Migration," tells us that the flight of Moses out of Egypt was a "petty event" compared with what he calls the "Great Migration."

The real migration was no "mere ramble, which today might be a week-end jaunt by car, but a mighty movement of a race, far back in the dim beginnings of time, from one end of the world to the other."

THE exodus from Egypt was a little second-day migration, nothing much compared to the real migration from tropical America into Asia, across Bering Straits.

Mr. Lee emphasizes the great resemblance between "the early books of the Old Testament and the popo vuh, Mexico" book of ancient legends.

The popo vuh, like the Old Testament, has the creation, "the fall of man," its flood, with a nahua in place of Noah.

Also, the forbidden tree and the treacherous serpent appear so vividly in the Mexican story that one of the early Catholic missionaries to Mexico exclaimed, "I verily believe that the evil spirit must have supplied these poor people with a spurious edition of our Bible."

MR. LEE reminds you "that there is great resemblance between the architecture of ancient Egypt and that in tropical Mexico and Central America, as witnessed by many."

The great Humboldt, believed that "Montezuma's ancestors must have dwelt on the banks of the Nile."

Another declares that Pyramids seen in Atlatzucpe and images beside them were "exactly what I have seen in Egypt," and Vatter, an able German historian, says "it is surprising to see how exactly the ancient Mexicans have copied the Egyptian style in their pictures and statues."

THE biblical statement "there were giants in those days" is supported by Humboldt's discovery of enormous human beings in Mexico, of which he said, "I do not know of any present race of men so huge and tall as those whose skeletons we have found here."

Many citizens of Jewish race who supposed that they came originally from Palestine will be interested to know that Mr. Lee would have the Jewish race begin on this American continent, which would make them "the oldest and original Americans" from tropical America they traveled north until they came to the frozen wastes of the Bering sea, and the being race, not the Red sea, was the place of the great passing over, according to Mr. Lee, longer able to sustain the so-called American standard or begin to buy the products of their own labor—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DEGREES OF CHARITY

The 12th-century Jewish savant, Moses Maimonides, held that there were eight degrees of charity and enumerated them as follows:

"To give, but with reluctance or regret."
"To give cheerfully, but not proportionately to the distress of the sufferer."
"To give cheerfully and proportionately, but not until solicited."
"To give cheerfully, proportionately, and even unsolicited, but to put it in the poor man's hand, thereby exciting in him the painful emotion of shame."
"To give charity in such a way that the distressed may receive the bounty, and know their benefactor, without being known to him."
"To know the objects of our bounty but to remain unknown to them."
"To bestow our charity in such a way that the benefactor may not know the relieved persons, nor they the names of their benefactors."

To anticipate charity by preventing poverty, namely to assist the reduced fellowman, either by a considerable gift, or a sum of money, or by teaching him a trade, or by putting him in the way of business, so that he may earn an honest livelihood and not be forced to the dreadful alternative of holding out his hand for charity."

America during the next few months will have great need for all eight of them. Having failed to attain the eighth degree, which is the summit of charity's golden ladder, it will be content with even the first. Yet there never was an easier time to give charity of the seventh degree. Surely there is no one who has more than his own needs require, in which the spirit of charity is not strong today—Newark Advocate.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland
New York City

Healthy Person Should Visit Doctor, Too.

Within the past quarter of a century the practice of medicine has undergone a marked change. In former years the doctor was busy fighting the effects of disease.

The old time profession was not familiar with what modern discovery has made possible in developing methods of preventing disease. Today, physicians are concerned with the prevention, really more than with the cure of disease.

I frequently refer to the importance of proper attention to diet. I realize that by the careful use of periodic health examinations and early care of all physical defects. A great deal has been written about the value, indeed the necessity, of such examinations. But it is a difficult task to convince the healthy person of his need to consult a physician. He does this when he is really sick, but hates to go to the doctor when he is well or apparently well.

Those who wait for ache or pain, should realize that by the careful use of periodic health examinations and early care of all physical defects. A great deal has been written about the value, indeed the necessity, of such examinations. But it is a difficult task to convince the healthy person of his need to consult a physician. He does this when he is really sick, but hates to go to the doctor when he is well or apparently well.

Preserving Health

Almost always the person who submits to the examination is pronounced fit and in excellent health. Then he knows when next he is examined by the doctor, any abnormal defect, no matter how slight, will be found in the curable stage. The first check up is the important one, but each succeeding one has its value.

You would not drive an automobile continuously without an occasional overhauling. Yet, many persons appear to expect their bodies will continue to function perfectly without overhauling or adjustment. Preserving health by early discovery of trouble means longer, happier and more useful lives.

By periodic health examinations we mean there is an examination of the body at least twice a year. The heart, teeth, tonsils and other spots of possible weakness, are carefully checked for signs of wear and tear. The span of life is lessened if one learns too late that trouble is brewing.

If you have not recently consulted a physician let me urge you to do so now. Do not postpone this visit, waiting until you have pain. Visit your doctor before you are sick. Prevention rather than cure determines the health of the nation.

Mark your calendar for a visit to the doctor every six months. Tell your friends of the many advantages found in this method of combating disease and poor health. Complete co-operation between the general public and the medical profession is necessary if the effort towards better health is to be a success.

NEW YORK Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 24—Many survivors of the holocaust still are squatters in Central Park, despite December winds. Some huddle in rock crannies; others, in dry ruggations of the empty reservoir. A few, in grotesquely contrived pup-tents, bivouac along the streams of the hidden by-paths.

The end of summer left about 300 homeless ones there and, even in the present chill, nearly 100 remain. The police do not bother, unless there is destruction of property. Sun-up finds many shivering before shivering mirrors, tacked to trees. Or laying clothes, if weather permits, in pools.

Indeed one rock cave, a domestic generosity of Nature, is inhabited by a gentleman known to squatters as "The Colonel." He is a garrulous aristocrat, who has buttoned his frayed coat, cocked a dilapidated hat and decided to go downhill with an air.

Passing, the other afternoon, I guiltily peeked behind the burlap curtain of his crevice. There was a blanketed mattress on the floor, a mirror, a candle. And on a bit of protecting rock was a row of badly made china shepherdesses, designed to simmer against the parlor mantle-piece.

Today, all squatters are men, mostly young and self-respecting. They cannot get jobs but they will not accept charity. Their plight emphasizes again that wild places of the earth have little use for men. A woman's touch is necessary to make a home. That's why it's so depressingly bleak.

Although ingenuity among jobless touches high peaks, nothing tops the gallant spirit of an ex-service man on 7th avenue in the 30's. A scruffy banner flaps across the entrance: "Come In and See How Animals Live—Free." In a dust-sifted room are crates containing a fox, coyote, prairie dogs, a weasel, possum and the like. In departing through another door is a sign: "Please donate 10 cents for the upkeep of the animals!" In Broadway's doxy Esperanto: "It's a living!"

Off stage, Judith Anderson is one of the human ordinaries. In every block one may see ladies far more personable. Yet, caught in the magic of the theater, she is beguiled with a fascinating aura few actresses achieve. In many ways indeed, she is the greatest dramatic player of our time. I was expressing my admiration to Fannie Hurst at an entrance. "And how marvelously she listens," added Miss Hurst. Which in a revealing flash sums up Miss Anderson's greatest charm.

East 29th street has a strip of Little Old New York, which painters should imprison on canvas before obliteration by time or another building boom. Three-story brick houses with lawns, tortoise-shell cats napping in lace-curtained windows and in one yard—before which I lingered for a half hour—was a double pear tree with the twin circles by a rustic wooden bench.

Along 26th street, I learned how barbers keep those red-and-white-striped emblems outside in constant twirl. A white-coated barber was winding up the clock works that keeps it going. I thought it was whirled by the wind.

Life has bounced two former editors into direct competition. Norman Anthony leaving Life, launched that highly subsidized ribaldry called Ballyhoo. W. W. Scott, formerly an associate editor, now issues a competitor called Pastime.

I stopped at the Bronx Zoo to see the monkey, Jay, left there several weeks ago. A keeper halted him in a limb-to-limb swing tournament with about 200 cage-mates, and shooed him to the bars. He greedily snatched peanuts, but with no show of recognition and scampered merrily back to his frolic.

While tarrying near the camel pen on the way out, one dromedary, in a scavenging head-sway for some tid-bit, blew his breath full in my face. Everyone has heard of the fabled pungency of a camel's exhalations, and knows they are not exactly scents from Arcadia. But you could chin yourself on this whiff. Yea, even skin the cat.

Drinking coffee my portion of cream never exceeds three drops. Invariably it annoys others who do not know my iron will, drop upon my taking more. Last night, my wife, after years of pent-up wrath, exploded: "Let him alone. He only uses just enough to make everybody mad."

If the soda fountains are permitted to serve draught beer the vanishing drug department will have to move into the back room—Washington Post.

THE DAY IN SPORTS

SPORTS BALLYHOO

The old sports ballyhoo, sure-fire crowd getter of a few years back, was only a hollow shell in 1932. No longer the pulchritudinous creature of the golden era of 1921-28, Mr. John H. Fan, vintage of 1932, demanded full value for his money and scorned extravagant claims with a critical eye. He still was eager for amusement but he demanded better quality and cheaper rates.

This turn toward a little discrimination on the part of those who pay the freight, was the outstanding development of the year in the opinion of many of the country's sports experts, who contributed to the Associated Press poll.

It was reflected, many observers pointed out, in a general scaling down of admission prices as well as in concerted efforts by promoters of both professional and amateur sports, to give the public what it wanted.

In a general way, the experts called attention to ten specific trends in sports during the year:

1. Better sport "shows," meeting the demands of more discriminating fans.
2. General economy in operations and reduced ticket prices.
3. Rules legislation to safeguard or improve football and basketball.
4. De-emphasis of college football with the accent on team play.
5. Decline of minor league baseball.
6. Greater individual participation, especially in less-costly sports.
7. Increase in golf play.
8. Slump in professional boxing.
9. Development of more interest in girls' athletics.
10. Progress in some professional sports, especially wrestling and football.

PURDUE UPSETS IRISH TOSSERS

Notre Dame's Streak of Consecutive Wins Is Halted at 19

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—Notre Dame will have to wait until some other time for a basketball victory over Purdue and in its next start will go to work on trying to build up another long winning streak.

The Irish last night made their eighth stab at beating the Boiler-makers, and wound up just as before, defeated. And with that 36 to 31, defeat, went a winning string of 19 straight.

Minnesota's veteran team racked up its fourth straight victory of the campaign, but just managed to outpoint Nebraska, 27 to 23.

Western Conference teams reached the last week of the year with a record of 22 victories over non-conference teams, against 11 defeats.

Ravenna Tossers Outclass Ellet

RAVENNA, Dec. 24.—The Ravenna High basketball team defeated the small Akron Ellet High cagers, 35 to 23, here last night.

Freddie Black, Raven forward, sank ten field goals and one foul to give Ravenna the victory.

The Akron Ellet team's scoring was led by Phillips who registered 11 points.

"Greeks Were Right," A. A. U. Head Says in Didrikson Case

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—Maybe the Greeks were right after all, Avery Brundage, national president of the amateur athletic union, sighed after he read the latest episode of the Mildred "Babe" Didrikson case.

"You know, the ancient Greeks kept women out of their athletic games," he recalled. "They wouldn't even let them on the sidelines. I'm not so sure but they were right."

Defends A. A. U.

With that he sailed in to defend the A. A. U. and its rules of amateurism which have been bombarded heavily since Miss Didrikson was suspended on a charge of professionalism, and then reinstated.

"I'm tired of all these charges that the A. A. U. rules were too ambiguous," President Brundage said. "The entire situation is covered in rule five in two and a half pages which set up the whole amateur definition and rules of disbarment. Miss Didrikson knew all about it a year ago. At least the club to which she belongs, a woman in Dallas, Tex., wrote us when the subject of advertisement of a certain milk concern came up."

"Originally, the rule called for disbarment when any amateur

Midgets Beat Lisbon, Pennzips Victors in Battle With Sebring

A field basket in the last minute of play, climaxing a valiant uphill battle, sent Salem all-star basketballers down to defeat, 27-26, in a sensational cage duel with Canton Clowns at the Salem High gymnasium Friday night.

The contest was a thriller all the way through and was the feature of a three-game program of cage entertainment held for the benefit of Salem Associated Charities.

From a standpoint of finances the carnival was only a fair success but as far as real, classy entertainment was concerned, every game provided its thrills for the handful of spectators looking on. Inclement weather kept the crowd down to less than 250.

Trojans Beat Lisbon

Salem Trojans, a great squadron of juvenile basketball talent tutored by Joe M. Kelley, gained greater distinction in climbing all over the best Class A Lisbon Methodists to gain a 38-30 decision.

Salem Pennzips lasses trounced Sebring Enna Jettick maidens, 22-16 in the preliminary.

After trailing the all-stars throughout the first three periods of play, the visiting Clowns, who put on a fine act before the game and between halves, climbed in front with a whirlwind rally that could not be denied.

Canton Forces Ahead

After knotting the score at 21-all, Pete Elliott tossed a long shot that gave his team a two-point edge then Kurtz tossed in his only bucket of the game to make the score 25-21.

Jimmie Scullion sneaked through the Canton defense for a fine side shot then Malcolm Rush put Salem within one point of a tie with a foul. Rush parted the net with a long shot that zoomed straight through the hoop, giving Salem a 26-25 edge with 20 seconds left to play.

Kinehart grabbed the ball in the center of the court, dribbled and shot to give the Clowns the victory.

Trojans Rally To Win

It was thrilling but held few more thrills than the battle between Kelley's proteges and the Lisbonites. The Salem lads trailed 9-8 at the quarter and 26-22 at halftime, then staged a brilliant spurt in the third period to forge ahead, 32-28, holding the visitors without a field goal.

The Pennzips also were behind at the end of the second quarter but came back sufficiently to clinch honors in the third quarter.

"Margaret DeWan was Salem's big star with 10 points. Anne Zelle, the team's leading scorer, was bed without a point, it being one of the few times, if not the first, in her career that she has gone scoreless.

Runaway Playing of Yanks Provides Big Feature During Baseball Season; Records Set

Baseball during 1932 produced as its outstanding achievement the return of power to the American League, in the runaway victory for the New York Yankees in the junior circuit, and their subsequent World Series four straight victories over the Chicago Cubs.

With George Herman Ruth and his shadow, Lou Gehrig, leading the Yankee attack, New York turned back the Cubs, led by their new manager, Charlie Grimm. This gave New York a new mark to 12 consecutive World Series victories.

Athletics Falter
Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics, who had fallen before the St. Louis Cardinals the year before, never got back in stride again, and the Yankees pummeled their way through with a minimum of difficulty. New York clinched the flag on September 13.

The one-sided race caused American League moguls to ponder the problem and discuss trades and deals to make a tighter contest and thereby bring back the absent customers. Connie Mack turned back the pages of history and started to break up his great club by selling Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Jimmy Dykes to the White Sox, a deal consummated during the World Series.

The National League had a bang-up race, enlivened by the firing of Rogers Hornsby as Cub manager early in August, the elevation of Charlie Grimm to the pilot box, and a sudden revival which carried the Cubs to the pennant.

Grimm took over the reins in addition to his first base duties. The Cubs were then five games back of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Pirates skidded and the Bruins hit an unbeatable streak, topped by a winning string of fourteen. They ascended to first place on August 11, and clinched the flag on September 20.

Lefty Grove won 25 and lost 10

Bill Jurgens of the Cubs was shot by a girl friend on July 6. The Athletics beat Cleveland, 18 to 17, in 18 innings.

Babe Ruth had an appendix scare on September 7, and hustled home. He was ice-packed and returned to service on September 21.

Lon Warneke, phlegmatic young Cub hurler, led the National League slappers with 22 victories and six defeats.

Lefty Grove won 25 and lost 10.

CANTON, Dec. 23.—Rallying in the fourth quarter, McKinley High defeated West Tech, 29 to 26, in a furious battle here tonight.

Trailing, 22 to 16, going into the final period, the Bulldogs unleashed an attack that produced 13 points in less than seven minutes and gave them their second victory in three starts this season.

McKinley took an 8 to 7 lead in the first quarter, but the Carpenters forged ahead, 15 to 10, by half time and widened the gap, at one point in the third period, to 22 to 14.

Probers Puzzled
In Murder of Girl
MOLINE, Ill., Dec. 24 — Who killed Miss Rose Gendler, 22-year-old department store clerk and why, were questions that puzzled investigators today as they shifted the few known facts about her death in the hope of solving the mystery. Her body, stuffed in a burlap bag, was found yesterday beneath a river bridge. Her skull was crushed.
The investigators knew she had telephoned her dressmaker last night from the store where she was employed that she also talked to an unidentified man with whom she made an appointment, but whether she ever kept it or not remained unknown, but they did know that she never kept an appointment with the dressmaker.
Police said they were convinced that ransom was not the motive for the brutal slaying, although a note demanding $2,000 was found by her parents, almost at the same time the body was discovered.
One theory was that the girl was slain when she repulsed advances of her kidnappers.

Woman Is Killed
WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 24 — Mrs. Myrtle Ross, 40, of Ozark, O., was struck and killed by an automobile while waiting for a street car here last night.

THE DAY IN SPORTS

SPORTS RALLYHOOD

The old sports rallyho, sure-fire crowd getter of a few years back, was only a hollow shell in 1932. No longer the glib creature of the golden era of 1921-22, Mr. John H. Fan, manager of 1932, demanded full value for his money and scorned extravagant claims with a critical eye. He still was eager for amusement but he demanded better quality and cheaper rates.

This turn toward a little discrimination on the part of those who pay the freight, was the outstanding development of the year in the opinion of many of the country's sports experts, who contributed to the 1932 Associated Press poll.

It was reflected, many observers pointed out, in a general scaling down of admission prices as well as in concerted efforts by promoters of both professional and amateur sports, to give the public what it wanted.

In a general way, the experts called attention to ten specific trends in sports during the year:

1. Better sports "shows", meeting the demands of more discriminating fans.
2. General economy in operations and reduced ticket prices.
3. Rules legislation to safeguard or improve football and basketball.
4. De-emphasis of college football with the accent on team play.
5. Decline of minor league baseball.
6. Greater individual participation, especially in less costly sports.
7. Increase in golf play.
8. Slump in professional boxing.
9. Development of more interest in girls' athletics.
10. Progress in some professional sports, especially wrestling and football.

PURDUE UPSETS IRISH TOSSERS

Notre Dame's Streak of Consecutive Wins Is Halted at 19

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—Notre Dame will have to wait until some other time for a basketball victory over Purdue and in its next start will go to work on trying to build up another long winning streak.

The Irish last night made their eighth stab at beating the Boilermakers, and wound up just as before, defeated. And with that 36 to 31 defeat, went a winning string of 19 straight.

Minnesota's veteran team racked up its fourth straight victory of the campaign, but just managed to outpoint Nebraska, 27 to 25.

Western Conference teams reached the last week of the year with a record of 22 victories over non-conference teams, against 11 defeats.

RAVENNA, Dec. 24.—The Ravenna High basketball team defeated the small Akron Ellet High cagers, 37 to 23, here last night.

Freddie Black, Raven forward, sank ten field goals and one foul to give Ravenna the victory.

The Akron Ellet team's scoring was led by Phillips who registered 11 points.

"Greeks Were Right," A. A. U. Head Says in Didrikson Case

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—Maybe the Greeks were right after all, Avery Brundage, national president of the amateur athletic union sighed after he read the latest episode of the Mildred "Babe" Didrikson case.

"You know, the ancient Greeks kept women out of their athletic games," he recalled. "They wouldn't even let them on the sidelines. I'm not so sure but they were right."

Defends A. A. U.

With that he sailed in to defend the A. A. U. and its rules of amateurism which have been bombarded heavily since Miss Didrikson was suspended on a charge of professionalism, and then reinstated.

"I'm tired of all these charges that the A. A. U. rules were too ambiguous," President Brundage said. "The entire situation is covered in rule five in two and a half pages which set up the whole amateur definition and rules of disbursement. Miss Didrikson knew all about it a year ago. At least the club to which she belongs, in Dallas, Tex., wrote us when the subject of advertisement of a certain milk concern came up."

"Originally, the rule called for disbursement when any amateur

Midgets Beat Lisbon, Pennzips Victors in Battle With Sebring

A field basket in the last minute of play, climaxing a valiant uphill battle, sent Salem all-star basketball down to defeat, 27-26, in a sensational cage duel with Canton Clowns at the Salem High gymnasium Friday night.

The contest was a thriller all the way through and was the feature of a three-game program of cage entertainment held for the benefit of Salem Associated Charities.

From a standpoint of finances the carnival was only a fair success but as far as real, classy entertainment was concerned, every game provided its thrills for the handful of spectators looking on. Inclement weather kept the crowd down to less than 250.

Trojans Beat Lisbon

Salem Trojans, a great squadron of juvenile basketball talent tutored by Joe M. Kelley, gained greater distinction in climbing all over the fast Class A Lisbon Methodists to gain a 38-30 decision.

Salem Pennzips lashed trounced Sebring Emma Jettick maidens, 22-16 in the preliminary.

After trailing the all-stars throughout the first three periods of play, the visiting Clowns, who put on a fine act before the game and between halves, climbed in front with a whirlwind rally that could not be denied.

Canton Forces Ahead

After knotting the score at 21-all, Pete Elliott tossed a long shot that gave his team a two-point edge then Kurtz tossed in his only bucket of the game to make the score 25-21.

Jimmie Scullion sneaked through the Canton defense for a fine side shot then Malcolm Rush put Salem within one point of a tie with a foul. Rush parted the net with a long shot that zoomed straight through the hoop, giving Salem a 26-25 edge with 20 seconds left to play.

Linehart grabbed the ball in the center of the court, dribbled and shot to give the Clowns the victory.

Trojans Rally To Win

It was thrilling but held few more thrills than the battle between Kelley's protégés and the Lisbonites. The Salem lads trailed, 9-8, at the quarter and 26-22, at halftime, then staged a brilliant spurt in the third period to forge ahead, 32-28, holding the visitors without a field goal.

The Pennzips also were behind at the end of the second quarter but came back sufficiently to clinch honors in the third quarter.

Margaret DeWan was Salem's big star with 10 points. Anne Zelle, the team's leading scorer, was held without a point, it being one of the few times, if not the first, in her career that she has gone scoreless.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 24.—The University of Southern California gridders will rest today and tomorrow, observing Christmas, but Monday morning must again start the practice grind in preparation for the Rose tournament game with Pitt, January 2.

Coach Howard Jones plans three or four long sessions next week, then a tapering off period for the Trojans.

The whole story of the Didrikson case has not been told. I regret to say that she is a girl who delights to see her name in the papers and she is attempting to capitalize on her present publicity. She has been badly advised."

Miss Didrikson, the one woman track team of Olympic fame who was supposed to have arrived in Chicago from St. Louis yesterday, was among the missing today. She failed to arrive in Chicago at least, the reporters and photographers failed to find her, and she was reported today to be "on her way west."

Runaway Playing of Yanks Provides Big Feature During Baseball Season; Records Set

Baseball during 1932 produced as its outstanding achievement the return of power to the American League, in the runaway victory for the New York Yankees in the junior circuit, and their subsequent World Series four straight victories over the Chicago Cubs.

With George Herman Ruth and his shadow, Lou Gehrig, leading the Yankee attack, New York turned back the Cubs, led by their new manager, Charlie Grimm. This gave New York a new mark to 12 consecutive World Series victories.

Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics, who had fallen before the St. Louis Cardinals the year before, never got back in stride again, and the Yankees pummeled their way through with a minimum of difficulty. New York clinched the flag on September 13.

The one-sided race caused American League moguls to ponder the problem and discuss trades and deals to make a tighter contest and thereby bring back the absent customers. Connie Mack turned back the pages of history and started to break up his great club by selling Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Jimmy Dykes to the White Sox, a deal consummated during the World Series.

The National League had a bang-up race, enlivened by the firing of Rogers Hornsby as Cub manager early in August, the elevation of Charlie Grimm to the pilot box, and a sudden revival which carried the Cubs to the pennant.

Grimm took over the reins in addition to his first base duties. The Cubs were then five games back of the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Pirates skidded and the Bruins hit an unbeatable streak, topped by a winning string of fourteen. They ascended to first place on August 11, and clinched the flag on September 20.

Bill Jurgens of the Cubs was shot by a girl friend on July 6. The Athletics beat Cleveland, 18 to 17, in 18 innings.

Probers Puzzled In Murder of Girl
 MOLINE Ill., Dec. 24. — Who killed Miss Rose Gendler, 22-year-old department store clerk and why, were questions that puzzled investigators today as they shifted the few known facts about her death in the hope of solving the mystery. Her body, stuffed in a burlap bag, was found yesterday beneath a river bridge. Her skull was crushed.

The investigators knew she had telephoned her dressmaker last night from the store where she was employed, that she also talked to an unidentified man with whom she made an appointment, but whether she ever kept it or not remained unknown, but they did know that she never kept an appointment with the dressmaker.

Police said they were convinced that ransom was not the motive for the brutal slaying, although a note demanding $2,000 was found by her parents, almost at the same time the body was discovered.

One theory was that the girl was slain when she repulsed advances of her kidnappers.

SYNOPSIS

Nevis and Bill Lancaster were supremely happy until Bill became successful selling bonds and they started living beyond their means. Bill entertains lavishly to promote business and is constantly on the go. Nevis sees little of him and she longs for the simple life they led when first married. Then Bill meets Olive Blanchard, who tries to win him away from his affections. Although Bill sees much of Olive and enjoys her company, he loves Nevis. Nevis, however, believes the affair is serious when she reads a poem which Olive sent to Bill. Piqued, she accepts the attentions of Harry Carter, a prominent architect. Bill is jealous, but when Nevis offers to give up Carter if he does Olive, he refuses. Their relations become strained. Carter tells Nevis he loves her and cannot live on without her. Nevis is stunned when Bill tells her their friends, Fluff and Les Waterford, are separating. Then comes news of another divorce in their circle and Nevis, picturing the same end for Bill and herself, is perturbed. Bill realizes Nevis still cares for him when she asks to take her away. Nevis breaks with Carter. Then comes the stock market disaster and Bill loses heavily. Nevis tells Bill he must not take a position Olive has offered him. Bill assures Nevis he was never unfaithful to her. An uncle of Nevis gets Bill a position on a sugar plantation and they leave for Porto Rico to begin again.

CHAPTER XVII

In a company Ford they drove five miles out to their new abode, on the sugar plantation, and inspected it. A gray house, on stilts, completely unfurnished. "Bill, I thought they furnished it for us!" gasped Nevis conscious of the lack of housekeeping facilities they had brought from New York. "I did too," said Bill blankly. They used to furnish the houses for employees, explained the representative. No longer, however. He added that milk and light and rent were free and seemed to think it quite enough.

So Nevis shopped, with the friendly wife of the plantation manager. Furniture in Ponce cost, she discovered, a small fortune. She had checked out most of Bill's hundreds, deposited in a San Juan bank, for very inferior wicker, of General Grand-Grand Rapids workmanship.

"Don't forget a water cooler," advised Mrs. Jones, the manager's wife. "You must boil all your drinking water, you know."

They moved into the house on stilts. In front of it lay a tangle of undergrowth. Behind it banana trees, including the apple banana, and likewise mangoes and lemons and a bush of jessamine. In front, too, there was a white road, bordered on either side by coconut palms. Along the road the oxcarts plodded, the sides of the patient creatures often running red. "Oh!" said Nevis, in horror, and on the horns of the lead animal a slim brown lad, a red flower behind his ear, and a sharp, steel-pointed stick in his hand. Beyond the road the fields on fields of cane, delicately green; and the low, lovely mountain, many blue.

There were half a dozen families on the plantation, and a native quarter—unspeakably filthy. There was a native store a tienda, at which one could not possibly find anything one wanted. A boy came around mornings for orders for food and ice and drove into Ponce to get it. The milk arrived, in your own scrubbed cans, on the porch in the early morning. Sleepily Nevis would take in the cans by moonlight. They were always full of ants, larks and other manifestations of nature. She would call Bill and get his breakfast by candle light as the company lights did not go on until it was sunlight and they weren't necessary. Hence Nevis' toaster and other apparatus were out of order. She bought canned heat and an alcohol lamp and managed over that. She struggled with the coal stove and the stove-pipe cut out of lead pipe and "dangerous," commented some helpful soul, "in an earthquake!"

"I simply must get a servant," she told Mrs. Jones, who shrugged and said, "Well, it isn't easy."

It was a month before a very lackadaisical native girl, clad in a shift, and smoking large cigars, could be persuaded to come and clean vegetables, get a midday dinner of sorts, dust the house and do the washing, primitively squatted at a wash tub under the house.

Nevis' feet hurt. Her eyes ached from the sun. She was afraid of the harmless bright lizards which ran all over the walls. "They're assets," Mrs. Jones reassured her, thinking of her twenty years in the tropics, a lean woman, very sorrowful, with tired eyes "they eat mosquitoes and things."

"They may be assets to you, but they're liabilities to me," responded Nevis, but was only forced to change her opinion during an epidemic of flying ants, which came sailing through the screens, shed their wings all over the place and developed into repulsive, wormlike creatures which busily ate up all your furniture. "Sure" said Nevis' next-door-neighbor, "the other day I put my hand on my ice box door and went right through it, it's a shell inside. I hadn't the least idea!"

Bill's duties appeared to be rising at five o'clock and riding over the acres of plantation with the assistant to the manager. He said, the first night to Nevis: "Don't ask me to sit down I can't."

Nor could he, horsemanship never having been his strong point.

He bought linen riding breeches and puttees. He said, after they had been there a month or more: "I haven't learned much. As far as engineering is concerned, there isn't any use trying to use what little knowledge I still have here. Not unless we are transferred to the factory end of the job over near Mayaguez. All this job is, is riding about a thousand miles for twelve hours a day. They call it inspection. Well, I found two stills and one man cut up with a machete. There's excitement to it there never was in bonds."

He found more when he was instructed in the vaccination of bulls against anthrax, and without rubber gloves and when, the deed once done, he had to stand by with camphor and oil to bring one of the beasts to, in case he was knocked out.

Socially wrote Nevis to Della, this place is a washout. Not that it matters. There were three or four homesick Southern boys, bachelors, on the plantation; and some married men with whose wives Nevis had nothing in common. And Mr. Jones, in the big house, a rock in time of trouble, helping in every possible way, even to offering Nevis her bath tub on any occasion when a hot bath seemed desirable. For although Nevis' house contained a bathroom and a shower room as well, the latter, including any quantity of spiders as large as tea cups, there was no hot water. It was of a sickly tepid temperature most of the time, the steam being warmed by the sun.

Nevis was wrong. Socially speaking, the little settlement was bound by laws which would have made Ward McAllister's life feeble. People were ranked according to position and wages; which put Bill at the very bottom of the scale of caste, normally speaking. But there was a catch in it. Bill had been sent down through the influence of one of the most important men in the sugar industry, a heavy stockholder and an executive of which this happened to be a subsidiary. Which put Bill—and Nevis—at the top of the scale and sent them to the company dinner in Ponce, given in honor of some New York executives traveling on inspection. "Inspection," said Bill, who by now knew his sugar, "What a damned comic joke!"

The married ladies, poppy from the heat and sloppiness from the same reason or perhaps by nature, paid calls. Nevis returned them, bored to death. Della sent down books and magazines and the day the mails came in was more than red letter, it was illuminated in gold and scarlet. They had Christmas at the Jones', a party of all of the American settlement, including the bachelors and going home Bill fell into an irrigation ditch. He said, ruefully, the next morning holding a head as big as Grand Central Station, "I thought I could carry. Prohibition liquor. But when it comes to champagne, sweet, and laced with native rum, I am as the child unborn in my capacity."
